western european christendom finds it difficult to comprehend the eastern orthodox church because it knows little about the practice and doctrines of orthodoxy even what is known is overlaid by many strata of prejudices and misunderstandings partly political in nature one of the obstacles has been the natural tendency to confound the ideas and customs of the orthodox church with familiar parallels in roman catholicism to escape this tradition pitfall ernst benz focuses on icon painting as a logical place to begin his examination of the orthodox church beginning with a brilliant discussion of the importance of icons in the eastern church and the far reaching effects of icons on doctrine as well as art benz counteracts the confusion explaining simply and clearly the liturgy and sacraments dogma constitution and law of eastern orthodoxy in brief history he describes the rise of orthodox national churches schismatic churches and churches in exile the role of monasticism and its striking differences from roman catholic monasticism the missionary work of the orthodox church and the influence of orthodoxy on politics and culture the role of the church can be defined in terms of the image benz writes that the church exists so that members may be incorporated into the image of jesus christ in that individual believers are changed into his likeness as paul writes in the second letter to the corinthians thus orthodox theology holds up the icon as the true key to the understanding of orthodox dogma the eastern orthodox church will be valuable to anyone interested in learning more about the church its thought its life and its ideals ernst benz 1907 1978 was one of the most distinguished contemporary german theologians and perhaps the leading western authority on eastern orthodoxy he studied classical philology and archeology at tbingen berlin and rome and turned to the study of protestant theology he became professor of ecclesiastical and dogmatic history at the philipp university at marburg on the lahn he is the author of buddhism or communism and theology of electricity on the encounter and explanation of theology and science in the 17th and 18th centuries

worship is something that we do but it is not something that we create the rites and ceremonies of orthodox christian worship today are the product of an organic growth and development which has been guided by the holy spirit and shaped by culture and experience the manner in which orthodox worship is conducted in the twenty first century is not the precisely the way it was done in the seventeenth or in the seventh some elements in worship communicate in the same way they have others cease to do so and are gradually replaced change occurs because anything that is alive grows and develops but in worship this does not occur quickly or for the sake of change but carefully and organically since the church is instinctively conservative when it comes to its traditions as we grow up and our bodies develop we do not suddenly decided to produce a third arm it would make no sense it would not have any real connection with how the human body functions and it would not be part of the integral whole but something that we must figure out what to do with each time we try to use it this is true in worship what develops in prayer and piety has an organic connection with what went before or else it makes no sense it must be a logical development of what went before or else we must figure out why we are doing it each time we worship if we must stop and decide why something is done each time that we worship than something is wrong
